

We are excited to announce the launch of Workers' Comp Hub (www.workerscomphub.org), a resource website for injured and ill workers. Workers' Comp Hub provides:

- Basic information for injured and ill workers in all 50 states to help them navigate the complex workers' compensation system;
- Resources and advocacy tools that present the problems, possible progressive reforms and pathways for pro-worker advocacy and action;
- A platform for sharing human rights based strategies and solutions as well as promoting actions and events.

Alongside regular news updates, we will be hosting a guest blog feature every month where we invite injured and ill workers, policy makers, practitioners, labor leaders, academics and others to share strategies and solutions that better meet the needs of injured and ill workers. This month, Allen Ray Bernard (injured worker activist), María E. Gutiérrez (Interfaith Worker Justice) and Jim Ellenberger (retired AFL-CIO) share their insights with us.

Our aim is to build a broad based network that connects policy efforts in workers' compensation with advocacy and organizing on the ground. We invite you to share feedback, resources and tools as well as suggest events and actions for inclusion. Email us at info@workerscomphub.org.

This is a joint project of the National Economic and Social Rights Initiative (NESRI) and the National Council for Occupational Safety and Health (National COSH).